

How to get around the Isle of Man

Public Transport

Let public transport take the strain while at the Isle of Man TT. Travel on the extensive bus network or hop on board the Victorian rail network, you'll find getting around the island easy and cost-effective.

Buses

The island has an extensive bus network - Bus Vannin - which serves the whole of the island on a regular basis including the Isle of Man airport and the Sea Terminal in Douglas. An increased late night bus service operates on Friday and Saturday evenings which serves all the main towns.

Buy a multi-journey ticket which will help you travel around the island. The 3, 5 or 7 day Explorer ticket allows unlimited travel on all scheduled railway services, the Douglas Horse Trams and most bus services.

Tip : The bus service goes around the TT course from Douglas to Ramsey when the road is open, there is no access once the road is closed. No bus service travels along the mountain section from Ramsey to Douglas, but you can access the bungalow area using the mountain railway.

Railway

The Isle of Man boasts three heritage railways – the Manx Electric Railway, Steam Railway and Snaefell Mountain Railway – which will transport you to your chosen destination in style.

The Electric railway travels from Douglas to Ramsey via Laxey, where you can also join the Snaefell Mountain Railway. You can take the Steam Railway from Douglas to Port Erin with stops in Castletown, Port St Mary amongst others.

Tip: The Electric trams are not affected by the TT course being closed. You can use the Snaefell Mountain railway from Laxey to access the mountain section of the course.

Taxi

For ease and convenience why not hail a cab? There are taxi ranks located outside Ronaldsway Airport and the Sea Terminal and throughout the Island's capital Douglas.
